What are Microclimates?

A microclimate is a climate of a very small or restricted area, especially when this differs from the climate of the surrounding area.
